

LEWIS HOUSE

PROJECT: LEWIS HOUSE

LOCATION: PERTH . AUSTRALIA

YEAR: 2012-Under construction

A marriage is moved from USA to Australia and decided to build a house in the middle of a natural forest beside a long beach of great beauty.

A narrow path leads to a courtyard bounded by thick walls that indicates where the house is developed. This intermediate space gives domestic scale and proportion to the immensity of the nature. Here, the different entrances are organized: the main; the service area; the parking pergola and the studio upstairs.

In the entrance hall, a large window allows to appreciate the sea view, which also enjoy the living-dining area and kitchen, the master suite and bedrooms of daughters. As an extension of the kitchen and dining room, a porch with barbecue and a fireplace prolongs the life of the family to the outside. A few steps below, another porch, the guests and the swimming pool area are touched again with the natural landscape.

On the lower level are located, a wine cellar, the service and garage.

The detailed design of the rooms stands out in this project according to requirements and activities of each of the family members.
