

PAMEKAS HOUSE

PROJECT: PAMEKAS HOUSE

LOCATION: MMIKONOS . GREECE

YEAR: 2002

The beauty of the location provides the ideal framework for the design of this home, in which the owners have enthusiastically participated during the construction work.

The house is arranged on two levels, both with direct access due to the slope of the land: an upper-level housing the bedrooms accessed through a patio and an adjacent parking lot and the main level on the first floor, which is in contact with the land.

A landscaped ramp on either side leads to the large wooden doorway, framed by bamboo, bougainvillea and an old olive tree. From this point, there is a large esplanade that leads to the home. On the left there is a shaded parking lot and in front you can see the high, white volumes of the houses, with two smooth curved stonewalls that frame the entrance.

On the first floor, which houses the common areas, neutral colors that unify the space and provide warmth prevail. The simplicity permeates all areas of this home. Open spaces that seek functionality in an austere and elegant way are a feature that is repeated on the outside with a large stone paved terraced area and the large porch. The infinity pool and the skilled gardening work, complete the exterior space.
